THE SUPER RIDDLE

"Here's a riddle for you," Chucky Chipmunk said. "What has a beak like a duck, hair like a cat, a tail like a beaver, four legs, webbed feet, lives on land, lives in water, lays eggs, hatches them, and feeds its young with its own milk?"

"What?" gasped Willie Weasel. "Is it a joke?"

"Nope. It's a real riddle with a real answer."

"Well, repeat it."

So Chucky repeated it. When he finished Willie laughed and said, "There's no such animal! You're a liar!"

By the time Glenn Groundhog got there the weasel and the chipmunk were having a fight. "What's up?" Glenn asked.

They stopped fighting long enough to explain. "He says I'm a liar," Chucky said.

"He is," said Willie.

They began to fight again. Glenn stepped in between them, separating them. He asked, "What did you say that made Willie think you are a liar, Chucky?"

"I asked him to guess the answer to a riddle, but he was too stupid."

"Stupid, huh?" bristled Willie. "Not so stupid that I'd bother working on a riddle with no answer to it."

"There is an answer to it, and it isn't a joke," Chucky insisted. He turned to the groundhog. "Glenn, you listen to it, okay? Maybe you'll know the answer."

"Okey-doke," Glenn agreed, and he cocked his head forward to listen very carefully.

The chipmunk repeated the riddle: "What has a beak like a duck, hair like a cat, a tail like a beaver, four legs, webbed feet, and lives on land, lives in water, lays eggs, hatches them, and feeds its young with its own milk?"

Glenn burst out laughing. "There's no such animal!"

"That's what I say," said Willie Weasel.

So now Chucky had two guys against him. They were both glaring at him as if he were the worst liar in the world. Angry to be doubted, Chucky yelled, "It's a platypus, that's what it is!"

"Ha ha ha ha!" The weasel and the groundhog doubled up with laughter. "Imagine an animal with a name like that! Platypus!"

Chucky was really shouting now. "Go on! Laugh! Stupid! I'll show you guys! I'll show you!"

In between giggles Glenn and Willie said, "Yeah, you go ahead and show us! If you can show us a p-p-platypus . . . ha ha ha . . . we'll do anything you ask us to."

"Is that a deal?" asked the chipmunk.

"A deal!" they laughed.

Just at that moment Oliver Owl alighted on the tree above their heads. Chucky looked up. "Ah!" he said. "Mr. Owl! You're just the person I need right now. You're the wisest creature in our woods. Surely you'd know the answer to a riddle, wouldn't you?"

The owl blinked one eye. Then he blinked the other. Then he nodded his wise old head.

"Here goes," said Chucky. "What has a beak like a duck, hair like a cat, a tail like a beaver, four legs, webbed feet, and lives on land, lives in water, lays eggs, hatches them, and feeds its young with its own milk?"

Oliver Owl thought a second. Glenn Groundhog and Willie Weasel winked at each other. They were sure that now Chucky would hear a third person say, "There's no such animal."

But instead the old owl replied, "Why yes, I know that animal. It's an ornithorhyncus paradoxus."

At first Willie and Glenn were stunned into silence to hear that there was such an animal. But then they realized they could still laugh at Chucky. "Ha ha!" laughed Willie. "Chucky said it was a platypus! Ha ha ha!"

"Yeah," Glenn laughed. "He doesn't know the correct answer to his own riddle! How dumb can you get! Ha ha ha!"

Right in the middle of their hysterics, however, the owl's voice broke in. "I used the scientific name," he explained. "Actually a far more common name is the platypus."

The groundhog and the weasel were quiet. They stared down at the ground. But suddenly Chucky was yelling at them to look up. What a coincidence! For what should come waddling up the path towards them but a fantastic creature that no one could believe was true if they didn't see it with their own eyes! He had a beak like a ducky, hair like a cat, a tail like a beaver, four legs, webbed feet—

"A platypus!" everybody yelled.

"Hi folks!" the platypus said calmly, and waddled by.

As Glenn and Willie stared after him, Chucky said, "Well fellas, remember our deal? If I could show you a platypus, you'd do anything I asked, right?"

They nodded.

"Well then, first of all, promise never to laugh at me again."

"We promise."

"Second, promise never to call me a liar again."

"We promise."

"And third, go home and study a few books. If you weren't so stupid, you'd have known all about platypuses in the first place!"

Up above in the tree the wise old owl chuckled. He was still thinking about the platypus. "My my my," he chuckled. "All my life I've read about the ornithorhyncus paradoxus, but 'til today I'd never seen one. Now at last I really believe it!"
